

Rooted in the practical life of the community which it aims to aid to an upward growth in strength, symmetry and beauty. GROWING out of the quality of youth of all ages about which it hopes to organize the community as its true source, inspiration and hope.

*You are of the Community
By so much as you give to it out of your life something Sempervirent.*

It is probably a good thing that there are more ways than one in the world of finding happiness. If happiness came only from being courteous, cheerful, pleasant and tolerant, it is difficult to determine the miserable state people would be in who can only find happiness by making life a misery for those with whom they come into daily contact. The world would be no place of happiness for them and perhaps Heaven would be no better.

THE ROYAL HOUSE OF HAVE.

Said the author of "Treasure Island," "The world is so full of a number of things, I'm sure we should all be as happy as kings". Yet for most of us the very fullness of the world is the greatest cause for unhappiness. We are so very busy on the surface with one thing after another, that by the time we learn there is a deeper meaning just below the surface, we have lost the capacity to receive it.

Stevenson's intuition, connecting happiness with fullness of things, is a true one; for the wise men, the teachers of mankind—messiahs, philosophers, psychologists and scientists, singers and poets alike agree, the truly happy "inherit the earth," have many things, many interests. Watch children and see how universally and unerringly their search for happiness leads them toward having things. And the gang of boys around the swimming hole, smoking forbidden cigarettes, listening to smutty stories, or planning a swiping raid are no more actuated by the urge "to have," than those other boys who have their whale of a time boy scouting, making a wireless outfit, or building a boat.

The trouble with all, young and old alike, is that we do not know what "real having" involves. Our civilization has for centuries been based upon the false idea of getting something for nothing, of "owning" what we do not use. So that our eyes are blind and our ears deaf to what nature is everywhere and always telling us, "you can really have only what you use." The very tissues of your body, the very organization of your mind, is yours only upon these terms. "Use" is the only legitimate heir of the royal house of Have. Happy the prince who singles out and marries this Cinderella, disdaining the false charms of the usurping daughters mis-, ab-, and non-.

We remember the man in the parable who attempted to keep the talent tied up in a napkin. Even that which he seemed to have was taken from him. We little realize the universal application to life of this parable of use. It is the very picture of life itself. When use ends, life then and there begins its decline. Every aspect of every grade and department of life is but the use of something given. Were the world a hundred-fold more full of given things, life would still depend upon and correspond in degree and quality with use.

"It was, says Burbank, "the savage Indian who gave us here in America the most important crop we have. It was the Indian who found the wild grass, teosinte, covering the plains and developed it into corn." The continued use through countless centuries of its tiny ears with but a double row of corn-like enclosed kernels, gives now to mankind the fully developed corn that feeds the world. The wild teosinte still grows in a limited area of southern Florida. In all the passing centuries it has had access to the same resources of soil and climate that in its cultivated progeny flows forth into the granaries of the world in fat ears of corn. Yet it has remained unchanged, waiting upon some Burbank to "use" its humble qualities. Put to a full use the little plant, in eighteen years, reproduced the centuries of Indian culture. Life upon any plane can not just be grabbed off in chunks. It is a continuing that flows like a stream. It requires alike an inlet and an outlet—channels of its own making adapted to its flow.

We are but recipients of the one life. Use is the unobstructed flow of that life. Happiness is the consent, the removal of friction and obstruction to that flow, the glad yielding to the higher within the lower. If this be so in its degree of eating, breathing, seeing, hearing, sensing, doing; in fact in all the intercourse of the body with the world of nature in which it is immersed, how much more is it so with the intercourse of mind with its world of minds? He has not yet begun to live who has not known the thrill of the mind's consent to that higher use of a mutual understanding which unites two minds. Who has a great masterpiece of the mind, a work of art; he who pays a great price for its material possession, or he who understands and appreciates its message? Who really has the woods and the mountains, he who devastates them or he who appreciates the message of their beauty and grandeur.

And what then shall we say of use in its reference to that highest intercourse of soul with soul as it should be exemplified in real marriage—love and parenthood? Can the happiness of this life be even imagined much less surreptitiously snatched, by any thing short of the highest use with which the Creator has endowed his creatures—parenthood, the utmost consent of one soul to another in response to which alone the highest life flows?

Will we then look out upon the world "full of a number of things" for some better house of have? Never can we fit, now or in the beyond, but in the one we now inhabit. It is being built to our order. Look into it. May your eyes be opened to recognize in it your inheritance from the great king, your royal house of have. In it are many rooms and several stories one above another, which none may open but yourself. In some room of your own choosing you must eat the feast of your only happiness. The narrow religionist has no monopoly upon the bidding of the master of all life to make ready to sup with him in an upper room.

CLOTHES AND THE WOMAN

(From the Baltimore American)

As to this vital matter of women's clothes, upon which everybody seems to agree the fate of the nation hangs, Rev. Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougner, of the Temple Baptist church of Los Angeles, comes forward with a solution. The Rev. Dr. doesn't mince words, says he:

"There is not one woman in a million who would consent to wear any dress modeled by a bunch of preachers. Consequently it will be best for all concerned if the preachers look after their sermons and let the women model their own shirt waists and skirts".

There's a man who knows how to bang the nail on the head. The ladies do not select their frocks upon the plan of salvation; they select them upon the plan of fascination, an art given little attention in the theological colleges. No woman, however religiously inclined, will take a preacher's advice upon how to conduct the very wordily amusement of getting a husband. That is business upon which women have concentrated the thought of centuries and the practical results have been enormously successful. The man who escapes the modern feminine net is either a genius or a fool for luck, as the pessimists would have it.

COMMUNITY'S CREED

Community's Creed is interdenominational—all the creeds rolled into one. Its creed is simply "Community Unity"—a joining together of all denominations for the benefit of all. Community finds it impossible to give its approval to the doctrine of "Lord bless me and my wife, my son John and his wife, us four and no more, amen." The world is large and the better understanding of humanity is fast making tolerane consideration of the views a part of the daily intercourse with others, and thus breaking down the spirit of "if you do not

Community feels that the majority of humanity is the best of humanity and the heart that beats under the coat beats all the outward professions as indications of the goodness of the individual. "Community Unity" will not be a detriment to any denomination and united effort will be the means of accomplishing many benefits quite impossible in a community in which selfishness predominates.

Community Mention.

During the Fourth of July holidays, Boulder creek looked like a city except there was no trolley cars running. The corner where the Big Basin road connects with Central Av. was busy enough to have a traffic cop there. The size of the crowd was very noticeable as the machines lined up at the service station for gas and oil.

Last Saturday night one of the big Fogel trucks hauling ties from the woods went through a bridge about five o'clock and the bridge was not opened to traffic until Sunday night. West Park avenue or the Sand Road was used as a detour while the bridge was undergoing repairs.

There are now nine big trucks hauling ties with an average of over 200 ties a day per truck, which, come to think of it, is quite a number of ties to go out from one town.

The town park is looking pretty nice these days with fine green lawns all around and the weeds taken out of the paths.

PERSONALS

The Misses Ida and Bernice Swarthout have gone to the bay cities for a visit with relatives and friends.

Wallace F. Pearce left last week for the Citizens Military training camp at the Presidio in San Francisco. Wallace expects to take a month of military training.

GOOD CHEER CLUB

The Good Cheer club is planning a dance in Middleton's hall Saturday evening, July 23, which is to be an all night affair. The club is a new organization and will most likely give something unique in the way of entertainment in order to make future events given by it merit patronage.

B. C. I. C. TO MEET

IN THE LIBRARY

Boulder Creek Improvement club held a meeting at the New Alpine hotel last Monday evening with a very satisfactory number of members present. Matters of importance were given consideration—one of the items was a change of place of holding meetings.

Through the courtesy of the librarian in Santa Cruz, permission was obtained for holding the meetings hereafter in the library every Monday evening at the same hour as usual. Five new members were added to the roll of membership Monday night.

The welfare committee, Mrs. Goslow, Mrs. McAbee and Mrs. Griffith, has taken in charge the matter of fixing the fountains, outside and inside, and Mr. Livermore has agreed to give assistance in putting the plumbing in proper working condition. This will be a greatly appreciated improvement to the town.

As a result of what narrowly escaped being a drowning accident, plans have been completed for placing a life bouy at the swimming pool to safeguard those who take advantage of the splendid bathing privileges afforded here.

Mr. Livermore has agreed to work out a lighting system for Boulder Creek that will at once be capable of giving the village very efficient service and at the same time be economical of operation.

The matter of housing accommodations for people who would like to come to Boulder Creek for a vacation sojourn seems to be one that could be given serious attention, in-as-much as ten to twelve different people have made inquiry for accommodations during the last week without avail and most of them went to Santa Cruz.

NOTARY WORK—INSURANCE

SEQUOIA ITEMS

Sequoia celebrated the Fourth in fit manner with fire-works. An unknown source supplied the fire; the inhabitants of Sequoia the work. The celebration began on the Third, and after three days' continuance is still more than a memory. Mr. Baumgardner's old, vacant house and unused shingle mill were burned and several acres of timber land were burned over.

A local mathematician left his calculations on perpetual motion long enough to figure that already there has been enough heat wasted to cook 892,849 of those delicious lunches which are served by the Domestic Science class of the high school.

Moral: Watch your campfires and indirectly help to supply the ingredients for those lunches.

Al. Lorenzana and Robert McGrath, both of Oakland, visited the Omnes over the Fourth.

Mr. and Mrs. Charvet, who have been staying with the Omnes' for the last two months have left for their home in North Yakima, Wash.

Mrs. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. C. Culbertson, Miss Lucile Culbertson, "Pop" Rae and La Verne Culbertson, former teacher of Sequoia, motored over from San Jose to spend the Third and Fourth with the Cahills.

Dr. and Mrs. Wilson spent a few days this week with the latter's sister, Mrs. Crawford.

WEDDING BELLS

Miss Esther Dool and Mr. Thomas Cullen were visitors to Santa Cruz Wednesday and while there secured a marriage license. On Thursday the Dool home was the scene of a very pretty wedding ceremony when Miss Dool and Mr. Cullen were united in marriage by the Rev. Withrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Cullen will visit Yosemite Valley, and other summer resorts on their wedding tour and will make their home in San Francisco upon their return.

BEN LOMOND NEWS

Mrs. C. A. Shuey, of Berkeley, entertained a party of friends Tuesday afternoon at the "Fir Below" the summer home of the Shueys in Ben Lomond.

Miss Sarah Wafer and Miss May Shannon, of San Francisco are spending some time at the Townsend apartment. This is not their first visit to Ben Lomond. They are enjoying the meeting of old acquaintances as well as making many new ones.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Morrill and three children, left Tuesday evening for Lompoc, where Mr. Morrill has accepted a permanent position as station agent for the Southern Pacific. They have made many friends during the sojourn in Ben Lomond who regret their departure but wish them the best of success in their new home.

Isabelle Brooks is visiting in San Francisco.

The Lades' Aid of the Presbyterian church held a very successful sale Wednesday afternoon in the rooms next to Park hall. Punch and cookies were served during the time; cooked food in abundance was on sale and rugs and aprons drew many housewives to lay in a supply of these useful articles. A second sale will be held later as many of the rugs were not ready at this time.

The finishing touches are being put on the new highway through the town which fills in the deep ditches along either side of the cement pavement.

Mr. Cross and family from Oakland are enjoying their vacation sojourn at their summer home here. The pursuit of angling does not yield as good results now as it did earlier in the season but there is enjoyment in being out after the finny denizens of the streams even if there is not much doing in the way of catches.

W. G. Coulter and family have returned from their tour up the coast and are now enjoying the quiet of Ben Lomond in their pleasant summer home on Hillside.

BROOKDALE BUDGET

Everybody is busy in Brookdale—the pleasure seekers and those who are doing all they can to make the days pleasurable.

Swimming, hiking, mountain climbing, loafing in the shade and enjoying good things to eat and drink are pastimes quite equal to the present needs of the populace.

Mr. C. C. Mitchell, who has been here for some time trying to recuperate from the effects of several operations, had a break down last week and was compelled to return to San Francisco, where he will again go under the knife as soon as he is sufficiently rested from the journey home.

H. C. Capwell of Oakland, gave a benefit dance at the hotel for the benefit of protection against fire in the neighborhood. Mrs. Shier provided the music and about 75 couples attended. The sum realized for a good cause was $130 net.

Tonight the Capwells will give a bridge party for the fire protection fund and will be assisted by members of the Brookdale Improvement club.

Dr. Drullard, a former mayor of Santa Cruz, after spending a week or two in his cottage here has returned to Berkeley.

Raymond Salisbury, who had his head badly cut by diving against a sunken timber while bathing, has quite recovered from the effects and is able to be about as usual to enjoy his vacation outing.

Mrs. Shier, of Brookdale hotel, is planning on a return to the hotel next

B. S. Hubbard, president of the Union Lithograph Company of San Francisco, enjoys the week-ends here with his family, who are here for the season, sojourning at the beautiful summer home in the woods. Mr. Hubbard's home here is one of the residences the village is proud of with its fine surroundings and delightful swimming pool.

A Movie Ball was given at the Brookdale hotel Wednesday evening which furnished no end of amusement for those present.

Kenneth Trefts, who went to Washington to take examination for admission to Annapolis Naval Academy, failed to pass the physical requirements and has returned to Brookdale. He has two or three more chances to take the examination and will be admitted should his physical condition improve in the meantime to enable him to measure up to the requirements.

SONG OF THE RISEN SOUL

Far back in the dawn of creation
Ere the human race began,
"God moved on the face of the waters"
And dreamed of the soul of man.
And the dream God dreamed at the dawning

He guided, the ages through,
Shaping, directing, uplifting,
Making his dream come true.
From the protoplasmic meandering
To the tiny electron's flame,
A something deathless was forming,
Something without a name,
Till I by my earthly body,
Imprisoned and held in thrall,
Awoke, leaped up, and harkened,
Alert to the spirits' call.

Yet sometimes, I know, when in silence
My body lay fast asleep,
I slipped the leash and went roaming,
Some heavenly tryst to keep.
And finally came the summons
I dreaded yet longed to hear
My call to the "many mansions,"
And with never a thought of fear,
Joyfully then replying,

Quickly I dropped all care,
Flung off my fleshly wrappings,
And took the path of the air.
'Twas the call of love, I answered,
The breath of my life-to-be,
As up through the enuous ether,
I mounted untrammelled, free.
Yea! I took the wings of the morning

And traversed the infinite blue,
For I am the flower of creation,
The dream of a God come true.
—Caroline L. Dodge, in the Christian Register.
